Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Large Print. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The present book gives an insight to understand the mental dilemma of the Asian people especially those who live in India, Pakistan and China. These people constitute one of the biggest pool of the human resources for the world but due to the conflict oriented policies adopted by their respective governments, the people of these countries find themselves living in a land locked prison with no window to understand the pain and happiness of each other. The war on terror and extremist groups in Pakistan with their desires to disintegrate India has also been given a soft touch in order to understand their mindless efforts. While the citizens of these countries don't support the policies of confrontation, they do believe in helping their foreign friends. The protagonist Rohit is the son of Indian defence minister who falls in love with a London based Pakistani girl. While it becomes hard for them to explore the world of their love due to the official positions taken by their respective parents, they still go ahead with their plans to live together and live in their own way. The other theme which has been explored at length is the relation of China and India and their border dispute. How a group of Chinese medical students come to help Rohit to free him from the clutches of Chinese soldiers disguised as kidnappers is another chapter which is very interesting to read. It also focuses upon the secret character of the Chinese policy makers. A detailed analysis has also been done to find out the nature of boundary dispute which has engulfed these two biggest populated region of the world for more than hundred years. The loyalty...
